2.4 Login & Logout Requirements

Where applicable, Interns shall record their login and logout activities through the Company's designated attendance, workforce management, HR, productivity, or project management systems.

Failure to record required attendance information, login information, logout information, or other prescribed attendance records may result in attendance discrepancies being treated as absence unless regularized and approved by the Company.

The records maintained by the Company's designated systems shall ordinarily be considered the primary source of attendance records.

2.5 Daily Reporting & Status Updates

Interns may be required to submit daily reports, end-of-day updates, weekly updates, progress reports, timesheets, task updates, productivity reports, project updates, attendance reports, or other work-related records as prescribed by the Company.

Interns experiencing internet disruptions, power outages, device failures, software issues, access issues, or other technical difficulties affecting attendance, reporting, or work responsibilities shall notify the designated reporting authority at the earliest reasonable opportunity.

Failure to report such issues in a timely manner may affect attendance regularization and related evaluations.

2.16 Time Zone & Client-Aligned Operations

Where required by project requirements, client requirements, operational requirements, or business needs, Interns may be assigned schedules aligned to specific geographic regions, client operating hours, international time zones, or business functions.

The Intern agrees to comply with such reasonable scheduling requirements as communicated by the Company.

Interns shall communicate in a professional, respectful, courteous, and constructive manner across all Company communication channels, including meetings, emails, messaging platforms, collaboration tools, project management systems, social platforms, and client-facing environments.

Abusive, threatening, discriminatory, offensive, defamatory, harassing, disruptive, hostile, misleading, or otherwise inappropriate communication shall not be permitted.

3.2A Professional Integrity & Status Reporting

Interns shall provide accurate, complete, and truthful information regarding assigned work, deliverables, project status, progress updates, testing status, research findings, attendance records, reports, timesheets, and related activities.

Interns shall not knowingly submit incomplete, unverified, inaccurate, placeholder, materially deficient, or draft work as finalized work. Interns shall also not submit AI-generated work that has not been appropriately reviewed, validated, approved, or brought to the required quality standard, nor falsely represent that assigned work, deliverables, reviews, testing, approvals, or project requirements have been completed when they remain incomplete.

Deliberate misrepresentation of work status, project progress, deliverable completion, testing status, approvals, attendance records, reports, or related matters may constitute misconduct and may result in corrective action, disciplinary action, restriction of internship benefits, removal from projects, suspension of internship privileges, mandatory retraining, or termination of internship.

3.2B Client Deliverable Integrity

Interns shall not knowingly submit, transmit, present, approve, recommend, represent, or communicate incomplete, inaccurate, unverified, misleading, unauthorized, materially deficient, or draft work as a finalized client deliverable.

Interns shall reasonably cooperate with review processes, implement feedback where appropriate, seek clarification where necessary, and make reasonable efforts to address identified issues, deficiencies, errors, quality concerns, or improvement opportunities.

The existence of revisions, corrections, feedback, quality reviews, testing requirements, or rework requirements shall not by itself be interpreted as unsatisfactory performance and may form part of the normal learning and development process.

3.3 Official Communication Channels

Interns shall use designated channels for official communications, approvals, requests, grievances, reporting, and operational matters.

Interns shall not knowingly allow assigned work, project responsibilities, deliverables, deadlines, reviews, approvals, or operational obligations to remain materially delayed, incomplete, or adversely affected without making reasonable efforts to notify the appropriate reporting authority or authorized Company representative.

Where guidance, clarification, support, approval, access, review, or assistance is required, the Intern shall promptly communicate such requirements through appropriate channels.

Failure to reasonably communicate known blockers or material concerns may be considered during performance evaluations, continuation decisions, project reviews, and internship-related assessments.

3.5 Internal Communication Governance

Interns shall not create, operate, administer, represent, or promote any unofficial committee, representative body, grievance group, compensation group, employee council, intern council, collective representation forum, or similar entity that purports to represent the Company, its interns, employees, contractors, departments, management, or stakeholders without prior written authorization from the Company.

CHAPTER 8 – TRAINING RECOVERY POLICY

8.1 Purpose

The Company invests significant time, effort, resources, training materials, systems access, supervision, mentoring, onboarding support, operational support, and organizational resources in training and developing Interns.

This Chapter establishes the Company's Training Recovery Policy to address circumstances where internship participation is discontinued shortly after substantial training resources have been invested.

8.2 Standard Training Period

The standard Training Period shall be thirty (30) calendar days from the commencement of the internship unless otherwise specified by the Company.

Where required due to performance considerations, learning progress, attendance concerns, skill-development requirements, role complexity, project requirements, client requirements, compliance requirements, operational needs, or other legitimate business considerations, the Company may extend the Training Period for such duration as it deems appropriate.

The completion of thirty (30) calendar days shall not automatically constitute successful completion of the Training Period. The Company may determine whether the Training Period has been satisfactorily completed based on applicable performance, training, compliance, attendance, operational, or role-related requirements.

8.2A Nature of Training & Supervised Project Participation

The Intern acknowledges that the Training Period is intended to be a practical, supervised, project-based learning, evaluation, and skill-development period rather than a classroom-based instructional program.

During the Training Period, the Intern may be assigned real Company projects, internal assignments, operational responsibilities, research activities, project deliverables, client-facing tasks, collaborative workstreams, assessments, simulations, learning exercises, or other practical responsibilities relevant to the internship role.

The objectives of the Training Period include:

- Learning Company processes, workflows, systems, tools, methodologies, standards, and operational practices;
- Understanding quality expectations, communication requirements, reporting obligations, documentation requirements, and professional standards;
- Developing role-specific technical, creative, analytical, managerial, business, research, operational, or professional competencies;
- Receiving supervision, mentoring, guidance, reviews, feedback, corrections, evaluations, and performance support from authorized Company personnel;
- Demonstrating learning ability, adaptability, professionalism, accountability, initiative, and readiness for increased responsibility;
- Seeking clarification, assistance, feedback, and support through appropriate reporting and escalation channels when required.

Work performed during the Training Period may be subject to review, testing, quality assurance, correction, revision, approval processes, supervision requirements, or additional oversight before acceptance, publication, deployment, submission, implementation, or client delivery.

Participation in real projects during the Training Period shall not, by itself, alter the nature of the internship, training structure, compensation structure, evaluation process, or other terms governing the internship.

8.3 Training Recovery Amount

Where applicable under this Chapter, the Company may seek recovery of training-related costs up to INR 10,000 (Indian Rupees Ten Thousand Only).

The actual amount, if any, shall be determined by the Company based on the circumstances of the separation, the training provided, resources utilized, duration of participation, operational impact, and other relevant considerations.

8.3A Misconduct-Related Losses

Nothing contained in this Chapter shall limit the Company's right to take appropriate action or seek remedies available under applicable law where losses, liabilities, claims, contractual consequences, client disputes, remediation costs, legal costs, reputational harm, or other damages arise directly from an Intern's fraud, intentional misconduct, deliberate misrepresentation, falsification of records, unauthorized disclosure, client diversion, malicious actions, or willful violation of Company requirements.

The Company reserves the right to determine, acting reasonably and in good faith, whether a particular act, omission, misrepresentation, or policy violation materially contributed to such losses or damages.

8.3B Client Deliverable, Rework & Remediation Losses

Where an Intern's intentional misconduct, deliberate misrepresentation, knowingly false status reporting, unauthorized submission of incomplete work as completed work, falsification of deliverable status, failure to perform assigned responsibilities after falsely or deliberately representing completion, or other willful violation of Company requirements results in substantial rework, client escalation, remediation effort, replacement staffing requirements, operational disruption, contractual consequences, or reasonably attributable business loss, the Company reserves the right to consider such conduct during disciplinary proceedings and to pursue any remedies available under applicable law.

8.3C Recovery of Company-Curable Costs

Where the Company reasonably incurs additional internal costs, rework effort, corrective effort, replacement staffing effort, quality assurance effort, remediation effort, or similar operational costs directly resulting from an Intern's intentional misconduct, deliberate misrepresentation, fraudulent conduct, or willful violation of Company requirements, the Company may consider such circumstances when determining disciplinary action, internship benefits, certification eligibility, training recovery decisions, or other remedies available under applicable law.

8.4 Circumstances Where Recovery May Apply

Training Recovery may be considered where an Intern:

- Voluntarily withdraws during the Training Period;
- Abandons the internship during the Training Period;

- Fails to complete the applicable notice period during the Training Period;
- Voluntarily withdraws within thirty (30) calendar days following successful completion of the Training Period;
- Abandons the internship within thirty (30) calendar days following successful completion of the Training Period;
- Otherwise discontinues participation in circumstances where substantial training resources have been invested and recovery is considered appropriate by the Company.

8.5 Circumstances Where Recovery May Not Apply

Training Recovery shall ordinarily not apply where:

- The internship is discontinued by the Company for reasons unrelated to Intern misconduct;
- The Company elects not to pursue recovery;
- The separation occurs under circumstances approved by the Company;
- Medical emergencies, serious health conditions, family emergencies, or other exceptional circumstances exist and are accepted by the Company;
- Applicable law, policy, or Company determination provides otherwise.

8.6 Company Discretion

The Company reserves the right to waive, reduce, defer, modify, settle, partially recover, or decline recovery of any training-related amount based on the facts and circumstances of each case.

Nothing contained in this Chapter shall obligate the Company to pursue recovery in every situation.

8.7 Notice Period Obligations

The existence of this Training Recovery Policy shall not replace, reduce, waive, or modify any applicable notice period requirements.

The Company's determination shall be final for internship administration purposes.

8.9 Recovery Process

The Intern may be provided an opportunity to submit relevant information, explanations, supporting documents, or mitigating circumstances for consideration by the Company.

8.10 Relationship with Internship Benefits

The application of this Training Recovery Policy shall be independent of the Company's determination regarding internship completion certificates, letters of recommendation, PPO consideration, experience confirmations, internship benefits, recognitions, or other internship-related matters.

8.11 Continuing Applicability

Successful completion of applicable exit formalities and clearance requirements may be required prior to issuance.

9.5 Pre-Placement Offer (PPO) Consideration

Interns may be considered for PPOs, employment opportunities, extended internships, contractual engagements, project-based engagements, consulting opportunities, or future roles based on business requirements, available opportunities, performance, conduct, skill requirements, client requirements, operational requirements, and Company discretion.

All such benefits shall remain subject to applicable eligibility requirements and Company review.

9.10 Reference Requests & Verification Responses

The Company may, at its discretion, respond to legitimate academic, employment, professional, institutional, client, or verification-related reference requests concerning the Intern.

Such responses may be based upon Company records, performance records, attendance records, compliance records, internship history, and other relevant information maintained by the Company.
